SANITARIUM PURCHASE IS ADVOCATED

C. E. Kimlin, Manager of Institution, Answers Communication

$175,000 FOR THE SITE

Letter Is Given Out for Publication by the Club at Meeting

In connection with the proposed purchase by the city of the sanitarium site for civic center purposes, the following letter, which is self-explanatory, has been received by R. E. Johnston, chairman of the civic committee of the Glendale Exchange club, from C. E. Kimlin, business manager of the Glendale Sanitarium and Hospital. It was given for publication by the Exchange club yesterday:

"In answering your query of recent date in regard to the possibility of the city of Glendale securing the sanitarium site for a civic center, we submit the following:

"Some months ago we gave an option to the American Legion, which was relinquished on an agreement which was mutually satisfactory. Since then we have been making plans for sale by subdivision in units of 25 and 50 foot lots.

"Offers of purchase have been made by different parties and we feel that the property can be turned in a comparatively short time.

"New units on our new location are under construction, making an early sale necessary, because of the large expenditure of money. However, if it is to the best interests of the city, we will defer further negotiations, giving you a few days in which to obtain the sentiment of the people of Glendale. Should your committee look with favor upon the project we would be glad to give your plans consideration.

"The portion which is for sale is 330 feet on Broadway and 279 feet on Isabel and Jackson streets, and from our investigations should net $175,000."

Following is the excerpt from the letter written by Mr. Johnston to George B. Karr, chairman of the civics committee of the Glendale chamber of commerce:

"Dear Sir: You will note from Mr. Kimlin's letter that this matter will be held open a few days only, as arrangements have already been made for the subdivision of the property. We further recommend that every civic and community organization of Glendale be asked to cooperate in the movement to secure this property.

"This is the last available piece of property, well located, which may be secured for a civic center, without condemnation proceedings. In fact, it is very likely that if the citizens of Glendale pass up this opportunity, that we will never have a civic center. We believe that if every organization in Glendale will get behind this proposition 100 per cent strong, that a bond issue of $250,000 to $300,000 could be carried. This would allow sufficient money in addition to the amount necessary for the purchase of the land to put up one nice building, say a Patriotic building, to house our patriotic organizations, etc.

"The purchase of this property for a civic center would be the greatest thing for the good of Glendale that could possibly happen; something that the next generation would thank us for as well as help us pay for."

During its short business session the club endorsed the work of its civic committee in starting the movement for the city to purchase the sanitarium grounds for civic center purposes.

President Jackson drew attention to the banquet which will be held February 1. The board of directors will meet at 5:30, the club will hold a short business session at 6, and the banquet will be held at 6:30. The place where this banquet will be held has not been decided on, but will be announced at the next meeting.

SEWER RIGHT OF WAY CAN BE PUT THROUGH—SHAW

City Attorney Denies the Truth of Statement in the L. A. Times

Contrary to the statement in the Los Angeles Times this morning to the effect that there is no state law which would enable Glendale forcing a right-of-way for its proposed sewer line through a portion of Los Angeles, Attorney Hartley Shaw of Glendale stated this morning that there are several ways by which the desired sewer right-of-way may be secured.

When asked this morning if the Times' statement is correct, Attorney Shaw said:

"No, that is not correct. There are several ways in which Glendale may be able to secure the coveted right-of-way, but these have not been gone into as yet."

It was disclosed at yesterday's meeting that state legislation enacted years ago permits the passage through one municipality for the benefit of another of water mains and telephone lines.

The statement of the Times was made in the report of the meeting held yesterday at which were members of the state board of health, attorneys for Glendale and Los Angeles. The meeting was held for the express purpose of ascertaining whether or not there is any way that Glendale can compel Los Angeles to grant her the desired right-of-way.

NEW BURGLAR ALARM HITS ON HIGH

Discharges Reports Like Shotgun Instead of Ringing Bell

A new burglar alarm system, which was tested in the police department last night, nearly wrecked the city hall.

Also, it almost filled the hospitals of the city.

This contraption is something extremely novel and unique. Instead of ringing a pretty-sounding bell, it issues six loud reports, which resemble the discharge of a shotgun.

Last night was the time for the official test of this apparatus—this new type of burglar dispeller.

It worked perfectly with the result that the jury and many of those who were doing the "dead watch" at the McLean trial, came near contracting a case of nervous prostration. However, this morning all of the patients were resting quietly.

It's no wonder it rained, say the patients.

WING ESTATE IS SOLD TO MEN FROM OREGON AND PHOENIX ARIZONA

Ben C. Sheldon and A. G. Smith, Purchasers, Will Subdivide Ranch Which Includes 21 Acres of Rich Land in Growing District

THE MOST IMPORTANT DEAL IN MONTHS

Marvin Smith of J. E. Barney Realty Company, Put Through Operation Which Involved Payment of $100,000, and Opens Up Desirable Land

The Wing ranch, which was purchased by Dr. and Mrs. Horace Wing 34 years ago, has just been sold for $100,000. The property consists of approximately 21 acres and is bounded by Colorado street on the north, Sycamore canyon road on the west, Porter street on the east and Windsor road on the south. The sale was consummated yesterday morning through the J. E. Barney Real Estate company, 131 North Brand boulevard, by Marvin Smith of that firm. Mrs. Wing was represented in the transaction by Maurice Healey, who was for seven years with the Evening Star, Washington, D. C.

This piece of property, which is covered with oranges and which is without doubt one of the choicest large tracts of real estate still unsubdivided in Glendale, was purchased from Mrs. Wing by Ben C. Sheldon of Medford, Ill., and A. G. Smith of 126 East Elk avenue, Glendale.

Mr. Sheldon was for six years a member of the Oregon legislature. He is heavily interested in real estate in Oregon, one of his holdings there being a pear orchard of several hundred acres. Since coming to Southern California a short time ago he has become interested in the Hollywood Country club subdivision and other large tracts in Southern California.

Mr. Smith came here two years ago from Phoenix, Ariz., where he is a large property owner. Since coming here he has constructed about $250,000 worth of homes and apartments, several of which he still holds. He has invested heavily in Southern California real estate.

Every tree on the Wing ranch was planted by Dr. and Mrs. Wing, and today some of these trees are 25 years of age. No grove in Southern California has been given better care and attention than has this grove. It has been a paying proposition from the start.

The purpose of the new owners is to subdivide the property as early as possible. At a very early date engineers will be on the property and the entire piece will be cut into good-sized building lots. One street will be cut through the piece, this extending from Colorado to Windsor. As a compliment to Mrs. Wing the new owners have decided to name this Wing street.

The number of lots into which this tract will be cut and the prices that will be charged for the various pieces has not yet been decided upon, but this information will be disclosed to the public within a reasonable time.

The sale of this ranch is one of the largest straight real estate deals that have been put through in Glendale for months.

Kirby was arrested on Brand boulevard. He was traveling down Brand, according to Officer Conners, and struck a machine belonging to Earl W. Smith, 900 South San Fernando road, which was going west on Broadway.

DEBATE RALLY IS STAGED AT HIGH SCHOOL

Conduct Mock Funeral in Anticipation of San Diego's Defeat

A debating rally was staged at Glendale high this morning in which the students in the dramatic department under Harold Brewster conducted a mock funeral for San Diego, the center of the stage being occupied by a very realistic casket covered with flowers.

Members of the advanced public speaking class acted as chief mourners. They were dressed in black, wore veils and at times were overcome by their emotions. The quartet of Glendale debaters, Katherine McNary, Harold Majors, Sidney Williams and Isabel Tousey, paid tributes to the deceased, and Rev. Pollock preached a brief sermon. The preacher having indicated some doubt concerning the deadness of the corpse, Undertaker Brewster procured a hammer and stood over the casket, inviting resurrection if any were to take place. A sad, but impressive poem was recited by Undertaker Brewster, who announced that in view of the doubt as to the actual death of San Diego, the interment would be postponed until Saturday morning at 10:30.

Two Juries Fail to Find Him Guilty of Exhibiting Deadly Weapon

After failing to reach a verdict, the jury which sat in the case of the state versus George H. McLean of South Central avenue, who was charged with exhibiting a deadly weapon in a rude manner, was discharged by Judge Lowe at 11:40 last night.

In the trial the state was represented by Attorney George E. Glover, while Attorney Bert Woodard represented the defendant. This was the second trial of Mr. McLean on this charge, the jury, at the former trial, also disagreeing.

Although not officially announced, it is rumored around the city hall that the vote of the jurors stood 11 to 1 for acquittal.

T. D. & L. IS SOLD TO BIG SYNDICATE

West Coast Theaters, Incorporated, Buys Entire Chain of Playhouses

Absorbing the T. D. and L. theater here, the West Coast Theatres, Inc., will enter Glendale theatrical circles, simultaneous with its entrance into many other communities, having announced the purchase of forty playhouses in the Turner & Dahnken circuit. The purchase price of the local playhouse is not given in the announcement. The price for the whole circuit is given as $5,000,000.

The absorption, according to Sol Lesser, is in line with a system of production, distribution and exhibition, connecting the playhouses with the studios.

In this way the new playhouses, of which the T. D. and L. is one, will be directly connected with the studios at Hollywood.

More than forty theatres are involved in the transaction, which added to the sixty-two houses now on the West Coast banner, bring the total now controlled by Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol Lesser to more than 100.

In addition to this purchase, which in itself is probably the biggest outright deal ever made in picture history, the West Coast Theatres have obtained important franchises for all of Northern California. They controlled these releases in Southern California and Arizona prior to the transaction. The Educational Film Corporation franchise for the northern part of the state also becomes the property of this chain.

On the heels of this announcement comes additional word from local theatre men in San Francisco that valuable franchises, including the Educational Film Corporation for the entire state of New York, also have been purchased.

Local American Legion Post Is Sponsor of New Unit in City

MANY APPLICANTS

Eugene J. Wix Selected to Head the New Unit of the Work

In this cosmopolitan Southern California of ours, we have often thought that perhaps an old friend may live just around the corner, or in the next block, but the change in name, address, and sometimes in appearance prevents our finding that we were friends ten, thirty, or fifty years ago. A man who has changed his business or employment, and, with the passing years his face has changed some, too, might meet a boyhood friend on the street, and neither would recognize the other. A lady's matron name often obscures her from those with whom she was associated many years before her marriage, or a second marriage may have taken place.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS, President American Society for Thrift.

S. W. STRAUS

THOSE who practice thrift will never fail entirely; they may not attain the heights, but they never will reach the depths.

No one, at the beginning of life, ever expects to fail. The lamp of hope burns brightly in youth. But hope alone cannot bring success. There must be concrete action along right lines. Steadily, step by step, the desired ends are attained. Where there is persistent effort with freedom from wrongful methods of conduct and living, there can be no such thing as ultimate failure.

And it is because the practices of thrift keep one constantly within the bounds of prudent living, this plan of life is the best safeguard against failure.

In a broad and general way, moral soundness, as well as economic stability, is the inevitable accompaniment of thrift practice.

Thrift is a character tonic. It develops the will and strengthens the moral fibre. Through it one is able to forego those habits of life that are harmful.

Thrift equips us for the temptations as well as for the vicissitudes of life.

No man can practice thrift without being a better citizen as well as a more independent one.

It is these aspects of thrift which should appeal strongly to parents and to those who are engaged in educational duties. Let us send forth our young men and our young women into the world with a thorough appreciation of the moral as well as the material values of thrift. After all, success in life is not to be wholly measured by material standards.

Learn the value of thrift. No better safeguard against failure can be provided than such an equipment.

CHILDREN ARE IN DEMAND IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—(United Press)—Childless "mothers" of the Chicago social world are scouring the country for homeless waifs to adopt.

The demand for the children of "the doorstep and the alley," who have been abandoned by their parents, or who have no parents, far exceeds the supply, Judge Victor Arnold of the Juvenile Court told the United Press.

"We have hundreds of requests for children for adoption, some from prominent families of Chicago," Arnold said. "So great is the desire of the childless mothers for children to satisfy the mother instinct that they are coming to New York and other cities for homeless waifs.

"Most of the families seeking children have been married many years, but have not been blessed with children of their own. The husbands have climbed the ladder of business success. The mothers have established themselves in the social world. But they both find their lives are empty and seek something upon which they can pour out their affection and their success."

Recently the fairy wand which has changed the lives of waifs from drab institution walls to luxury and the promise of education was waived by three prominent families here.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Heller brought from New York a baby boy whom they named John and made heir to their fortune. Heller is the senior member of the firm of Heller & Rose, diamond merchants.

Walter I. Schiff, banker and manufacturer, and Mrs. Schiff, adopted a baby girl.

NEW PRESIDENT OF THE BOY SCOUT COUNCIL OF VERDUGO HILLS SHOWS MEMBERS OF TROOP VALUE OF THRIFT

Mr. A. R. Eastman, president of the Boy Scouts of Verdugo Hills council, also president of Glendale State bank, entertained several score of Boy Scouts Wednesday afternoon in his bank, explaining the detailed workings of the bank, and gave them a talk on thrift. Among other things, Mr. Eastman told them that Thrift is Frugality; good husbandry, or, if you wish, the economical management of property. To be thrifty, means to be careful of one's income and outlay.

"It was chiefly during the war that the word "Thrift" lost much of its significance," stated Mr. Eastman. "Is it any wonder, then, that we hear so much complaining in the world today. It has been estimated that the vast majority of people have lost the art of living within their incomes. Many a man goes around lamenting because he is unable to make ends meet. He is apt to blame conditions over which he has no control, when as a rule, he himself is the guilty party. Perhaps he earned $30 a week, but he arranged to spend at the rate of $35 or $40 a week, and, when bankruptcy stares him in the face, he claims that somebody is trying "to do him" and knocks the other fellow instead of himself, as he really should.

"'But,' someone will say, 'the milk has been spilled and it is of no use to complain about it. How shall I manage with only a small income and nothing to save for a rainy day?' In other words is it possible to be thrifty? In many cases, incomes are such as to make the practice of thrift compulsory, but the difficulty is that many people practice thrift in a haphazard way; which, perhaps, means not at all, rather than according to a definite plan.

"Use a budget plan," urged Mr. Eastman. "Making a budget means simply planning the wisest use of one's income. No matter whether a person has the management of a home or just his own personal expenses, he should prepare at the beginning of the year a tentative plan for the use of the income. It may be found that the plan will not work perfectly—that it was made relatively long in some places and short in others—but by keeping a careful account of all expenditures and comparing with the budget, some very useful things will be learned and the next budget can be more accurately planned and more consistently followed.

"No household or personal budget is complete without having in it the item of savings, and this should be the first item. A certain part of one's income such as a fifth, or a tenth, ought to be determined upon as savings—it should be some part, even though it may have to be a very small part—and when the pay envelope is received the very first money spent from it should be that part planned for in the budget as 'savings.' Just as the regular dripping wears away the stone, so will regular savings, if carefully invested, provide for the future which everyone plans to provide for sometime.

"Some may feel that the interest paid on all safe investments such as Term Savings accounts is so small that they will just keep their money in a checking account, with the result, all too often, that the checking account has slipped away when it was needed for an emergency. In addition to the interest received on money put in Term savings accounts, the habit of regularity of saving is worth much, and then one will hesitate to break in on a savings account.

"The historian of the future may quite properly write of this generation that it made some of the grievous mistakes by spending money for luxuries and articles that are by no means helpful instead of investing it in efforts centering in the betterment of civic, economic and housing conditions.

"If Boy Scouts will develop the habit and desire to conserve rather than to waste or destroy, as taught by the Scout law of Thrift, they will learn the value of money. Further, the business experience, however small, gained in earning the dollar or two, starts him thinking about his future vocation. I do not recommend to you fellows that you chase the "almighty dollar.' No, but I do recommend that you save it and buy a good education and equip yourself for the future—then, instead of you chasing the dollar, the dollar will chase you.

"It requires no sacrifice to bank money wheedled out of dad. The Scout really appreciates the money he earns by his own labor.

"Some Scouts have made articles of craftsmanship, such as radio sets, now in vogue, and sold them. Others have small home savings banks and put away all their nickles, dimes and pennies, which grow very rapidly.

"Another good idea to develop thrift is to have a bunch of Boy Scouts start out with only 25 cents apiece for a three-day outing and to earn the balance of their needs during this three days without begging. This will also have a tendency to make boys more careful with their food and perhaps teach them to not waste food while at their camps. All this tends to make the Scouts thrifty."

CUTLER AUTOMATIC DIRECTORY IS MARKETED

It should be a matter of interest to all Glendalians to know that one of the most ingenious and interesting inventions upon the market is the work of William C. Cutler of this city, being the Cutler Automatic Directory. It can be seen at the Whitaker Pharmacy on East Broadway, at Spohr's Drug Store, in the Chamber of Commerce of this city and at many of the large hotels in Los Angeles. With a device something like the dial of the automatic telephone, and with push buttons and a release lever, it is possible for the seeker for information about any city in the district covered by the machine or the special lines of business conducted in that city to secure it for himself by operating one of these machines and having a printed sheet bearing the facts desired rolled before his vision after he has manipulated the dial and the lever.

Twenty of these free automatic information devices are now in use in Los Angeles county and contracts for the construction of 130 additional machines are being entered into. It is in addition to being a public convenience a money-making device which promises to put in the shade the nickel in the slot machines as a legitimate money-maker.

Officers and directors of the Cutler Directories Company are L. G. Scovern, Glendale, president; George A. Whitaker, Glendale, vice-president; A. E. Dufur, Burbank, treasurer; Gordon P. Felts, Hollywood, secretary; B. A. Smith, Los Angeles, director; all of the officers being also members of the directorate.

Listening in on Eve

A FRESH START

"Well!" began the handsome young man who was having luncheon with the girl he had quarreled with five years before and had not seen since. "I see by your left hand you aren't married yet, Begonia!"

"Oh, no!" said the beautiful young woman, who had met the handsome young man on the avenue quite by accident and thanked her stars she had been able to recall his name. "Are you, Redmond?"

"How can you ask?" reproached the handsome young man. "Nope. Something seems wrong—I have it! You never called me Redmond five years ago. You called me Reddy and did it with a cute little lingering accent. I'd feel more at home if you did it again. Redmond sounds as though something disagreeable were about to happen! I can't believe this is you, Begonia. You are more beautiful than ever! I don't understand in the least how you have escaped matrimony all this time, I really don't! I hope you didn't become a man hater when—er, that is——"

"Do you?" asked the beautiful young woman. "That's funny, because I was just wondering whether—er—anything I had done had made you distrustful of women. I should be so sorry if I thought I was in the least responsible."

"Not at all, not at all!" the handsome young man cried, and then tried to turn it into what he should have said, "that is, of course, I was terribly broken up when you turned me down, Begonia, but one outlives sorrows."

"Yes, indeed," the beautiful young woman told him heartily. "It is simply surprising how quickly one outgrows early fancies."

"Indeed," the young man interrupted a trifle huffily. "I suppose you have had so many affairs since my day that I seem a mere episode in your life. A girl simply doesn't care how she ruins a man's existence."

"Oh, did I spoil yours, Reddy?" poyously asked the beautiful young woman. "I never dreamed it meant so much to you."

"Oh, I've borne up," said the young man. "I've taken a few girls, one or two or maybe three, around a bit."

"But you didn't enjoy yourself," soothed the young woman sympathetically. "I feel perfectly dreadful to think it is all my doing and I never dreamed you would take it so much to heart."

"How have you passed the time?" inquired the young man hastily. "When I think of your embittered existence all this while I reproach myself terribly, Begonia. I suppose you've simply scorned all men and I'm responsible."

"Well," the young woman confided, "I've tried to hide my real feelings and snatch a little pleasure as I went along."

"That's fine!" the handsome young man said in a tone which meant that it was far from fine and he didn't like it. "I should never get over it if I had broken your heart, or anything like that! I though when I first saw you that there was something a trifle sad about your expression, Begonia."

"Oh, was there?" the beautiful young woman cried rapturously. "To think I could do it! You see, Reddy, I was going over my part in an amateur play the crowd is giving and I am unhappy and persecuted in it."

"Oh, really!" the young man commented. "Of course, in these days it is foolish to expect a girl to have any real deep feelings about anyone or anything."

"You looked terribly stern and sort of tragic yourself," the handsome young woman told him interestedly. "The instant I saw you, before I realized who it was, I said to myself that there was a man who looked as though tragedy had touched his life! I hope, oh, I do hope, Reddy, that nothing that happened in the past——"

"My shoes are new and were hurting me," the young man told her reluctantly. "Say—tell me the truth—how many times have you really thought of me at all in the past—say, the last three years, Begonia? Tell the truth!"

The beautiful young woman looked up at him cornerwise and then she twinkled. "I will," she said sweetly, "if you'll do the same, Reddy!"

"Well—er—" said the young man. "Er——"

"Er, too," the beautiful young woman agreed in relief. "Now that we realize that we'd forgotten all about each other, to say nothing of our little flirtation, let's settle down for a nice visit and everything!"

"Instead of forgetting, I think I am just beginning to remember," the handsome young man told her as he studied her. "And I think it will take all the spare time I have while I am in town to tell you about it, so you might as well cancel all other dates, Begonia! I've just discovered five years wasted, and I didn't know it!"

A gilded youth found himself broke and decided that as he couldn't get work in New York, he would try going abroad, and as he had no passage money, he would try to work his way on shipboard. But it was still hard work to get placed; shipping men didn't seem to like him. At last, however, a big liner was about to leave and a stoker failed to turn up. With great joy he signed, went aboard and was directed below.

Nothing was seen or heard of him for three days, but on the fourth day the skipper suddenly came upon a resplendent figure in full yachting kit, with glasses slung over one shoulder promenading the deck.

"What are you doing here?" he demanded. "I thought I told you to go below?"

The youth gazed rapturously at the irate officer, stepped back, tapped him lightly on the shoulder and said: "Oh, haven't you heard? I've left."

BAGS OF PAISLEY

Paisley shawl designs are exceedingly popular this year and one finds them made up in all sorts of ways. Beautiful bags of Paisley have the design worked out in steel beads and the effect is indescribably rich.

"Say, Herman Nelson, give me the location of a Bank in Pomona, Riverside or Santa Barbara."

Mr. Nelson says: "Why should I bother with such information when I can step into the Chamber of Commerce, the Broadway Pharmacy or Graham & Kirk's place of business, and by the use of the Cutler Selected Directory Service, which is absolutely free, get the answer to that question, and a thousand and one other important facts about Southern California?"—and that's just it—WHY?

The Cutler Selected Directory Service Company has installed this Service for your free use, and the Service is being extended in 74 towns, from Bakersfield to the Mexican line, and many more of our Directory Service machines will be installed in the near future in Glendale.

AT THE THEATRES

"HUNGRY HEARTS" IS IMMIGRANT STORY

There was shown at the Glendale theater last night for the first time in Glendale a motion picture so true, so human, so appealing, so humorous, that it arouses anew the conviction that the motion picture, when at its best, is a new and distinctive art—an art the equal of its elder brother the stage or any of the allied arts of story-telling, painting, and sculpture. It has many of the elements of each and yet has a new element all its own in such photoplays as "Hungry Hearts," Goldwyn's screen version based upon the volume of short stories of the same title written by Anzia Yezierska, which is the current offering at the Glendale theater.

"Hungry Hearts" tells the story of a Russian family which emigrated to America in search of opportunity, the justice and the hospitality which they believed it held out to the oppressed of other nations. Many of their illusions were shattered almost at once but before the dramatic story unfolded has reached its conclusion the family has found here that justice which had failed it in its native land.

AN EXCEPTIONAL PREVIEW AT THE T. D. & L.

"Her Own Money," with Ethel Clayton will be shown for the last times at the T. D. & L. theater tonight. This is one of the best stories pictured for this star this season. It is most interesting, entertaining and has a kick in it that will cause many to sit up and take notice.

Tonight is the night scheduled by Ralph Allan for the big preview of the 8-reel special by Sidney Franklin, who made "East is West." It is another of those many enjoyable surprises furnished by the popular theater manager during the past year. Everybody in town is expected to be there.

Harold Lloyd in "Dr. Jack," beginning Monday at the T. D. & L. theater is the "big show" announced for that house next week.

RUDD-STEVENSON NUPTIALS ARE CELEBRATED

A group of young people from the Bible Institute, Los Angeles, drove out to Glendale Monday afternoon, and looked up Rev. W. E. Edmonds, of the Presbyterian church, who united in marriage two of the group, Miss Zilpha Stevenson, of Los Angeles, and Benjamin Rudd, of Glendale. The ceremony was witnessed by the Misses Margaret and Myrtle Stevenson, sisters of the bride. The happy young couple will take up their residence at 236 South Cedar street, Glendale.

Mrs. F. J. Rogers of 535 North Kenwood street has as her house-guests for the winter her cousin, Miss Mildred Goings, and Miss Helen Aubrey, of Indianapolis.

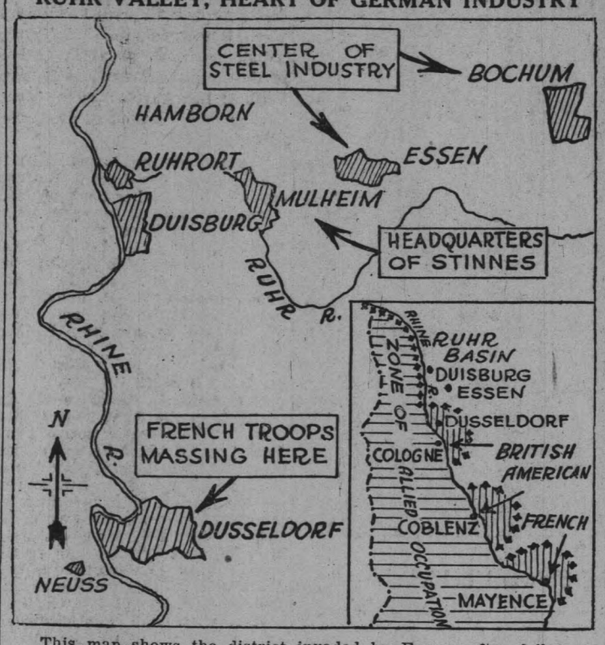
LATEST PHOTOGRAPHS FROM THE FRENCH ADVANCE

News of the World Told in Pictured Form for the Press Readers

RUHR VALLEY, HEART OF GERMAN INDUSTRY



This map shows the district invaded by France after failure to agree on reparations. The Ruhr valley has been called the "richest jewel in the Prussian crown." It is the heart of German industry, the greatest European center of population. Within an area 20 by 40 miles dwell 9,500,000 of the world's busiest people. They work some of the richest coal mines and largest factories in Europe. Besides their coal, they produce iron ore, zinc and copper. Textile mills crowd the iron industries.

ONE REASON THE FRENCH WANT RUHR DISTRICT; SURFACE COAL DEPOSITS WORKED BY GERMANS

This photograph shows Germans mining soft coal in the Ruhr Basin. This coal, a cheap, low grade fuel, is skimmed off the surface. When pressed into briquettes it becomes a staple article of commerce.

Gen. Degoutte, Leader of French Troops That Invaded Rhur District

The late Dr. Creighton, bishop of London, once made a visit to Father Stanton's church in High Holborn, a most ritualistic organization. The service was quite to his liking, but Father Stanton talked so fast that he did not have a chance to say anything until he got into his carriage to go away. Then he remarked: "I like your service, Stanton, but I don't like your incense."

"Very sorry, my lord, very sorry," replied Father Stanton, submissively, "but it is the very best I can get for 3 shillings and 6 pence a pound."

Mrs. Seville passed away at 7 p. m., the same hour and on the same date as her marriage to Mr. Seville. She was born in Walnut, Iowa, on August 31, 1881.

Mrs. Seville was a member of Atlantic Shrine, Order of the White Shrine of Jerusalem of Walnut, Iowa, and of Mignon Chapter No. 286, Order of the Eastern Star of Walnut, Iowa, of which she was the past matron. She was also past district deputy inspector of the state of Iowa.

The body will be taken to Walnut, Iowa, for burial, accompanied by her husband and son, tonight. Jewel City Undertaking company in charge.

MRS. LUCINDA HOTALING
Mrs. Lucinda Hotaling passed away January 24, 1923, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wm. La Fountain, 137 West Acacia avenue. She was born October 4, 1830, and had made her home with her daughter for the past forty-two years, residing in Glendale for nine years. Funeral services will be held at the L. G. NEW YORK CITY
125 YEARS AGO
The population was about 33,000.

In 1793 the city was policed by watchmen and highway robberies and riots were of frequent occurrence.

Ordinances excluding pigs from streets had to be passed.

Cartmen were not allowed to sit in their carts unless so permitted because of age or infirmity. They themselves had to drive and they were not allowed to employ substitutes unless these subs were especially licensed by the mayor. Any cartman that refused to employ his cart when required was fined twenty shillings. The city's rate schedule for the carrying of such a load as bricks, seven barrels of flour, or two bales of cotton was one shilling for a half mile.

The franchise in 1793 was limited to freeholders and freemen. A freeholder was the possessor of a freehold estate, either in his own name or in that of his wife, the estate being valued at twenty pounds sterling. Freemen, who might be merchants, traders, or shopkeepers, were those who paid five pounds. Mechanics were charged thirty shillings.

The state laws provided that persons who threatened to run away and leave their wives or children as public charges should receive not more than sixty days in the House of Correction. The same penalty was also inflicted upon those who, not having the wherewithal to maintain themselves, lived idle without employment; upon beggars going from door to door or placing themselves in the streets to ask alms; upon all jugglers, and all who pretended to have skill in physiognomy, palmistry, fortune telling, and other crafty sciences.

Richard Varick was the second mayor of New York from 1789 to 1801. The city was divided into seven wards, and there was one alderman from each ward, an assistant, two assessors, a collector, and two constables.

BLACK SATIN PILLOW
A welcome Christmas gift would be a black satin pillow cross-stitched and embroidered in colors and edged with gold guimpe. The work is easy and most women enjoy cross-stitching.

If a woman wants a man to throw himself at her feet she should not throw herself at his head.

Look Young! Bring Back Its Natural Color, Gloss and Attractiveness

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evening. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant. D. W. POLLARD ADDRESSES THE EXCHANGE CLUB

"Why Do Boys Gang Together?" Is Question Answered

The National Exchange Club of Glendale which met at a noon luncheon today at the Broadway Inn heard a very interesting talk by D. W. Pollard, National Field Representative of the Boy Scouts of America. The theme of Mr. Pollard's talk was, "Why Do Boys Gang Together?" which he followed up by telling of the stages of development through which boys must pass on their way to manhood.

"Scientists tell us the boy lives out the early history of the race," stated Mr. Pollard. "Take for instance the small boy who digs in the sand or makes a big hole in the backyard, harking back to the cave man; then later building his house in the tree tops, and still later imitating the savage with his paint and feathers and bow and arrows. But the period most interesting of all is the tribal or gang period, for as primitive men gathered together by families and tribes for protection so the boy at about the age of twelve seeks the companionship of other boys and as the tribe was loyal to their chief, so the boy pledges loyalty to the gang leader. The blackest mark upon a boy's character is to "squeal" on the gang, and a boy is ostracized who does so.

"Scouting fits into the stage the boy is passing through," according to Mr. Pollard. "For as the early tribe used to hunt the forest and fish the streams so the Boy Scout has his hikes or camps and satisfies the instinct within. The runaway boy is often led into paths of adventure by something he does not understand and in most cases because he is not a Boy Scout."

Mr. Pollard told of instances when gangs of so-called "tough boys" were taken to camp and with training under the new environment completely changed in their habits. He also spoke of the educational nature of the Boy Scout program in the preparation for life. More than 1600 lives were saved last year by the prompt treatment in emergencies by Boy Scouts who were trained for the work. During the late war the scout trained young man was chosen for leadership in nearly every department of service. First class scouts have found their vocation in life through the merit badge examinations of which there are 69, taking in subjects all the way from agriculture to taxidermy.

Congress has recognized the movement by granting a federal charter. The American Red Cross and the scout organization are the only two movements that have thus been honored by Congress. President Wilson, when in office, called upon every community to organize scouting as an aid to good citizenship. Recently at the convention of City Superintendents of Schools one whole session was taken up with methods for the fostering of the movement in the public schools Two and one-half million boys have passed through the movement during the past thirteen years. There are now eight million boys of scout age in the country and in the Verdugo Hills District there are 1700 boys who are ready for boy scout work.

"It is must better to form the boys than to reform them," stated Mr. Pollard, "and to make for the highest form of citizenship we must begin with the boy."

"Mike," the Battling Canary, Entertains America's Passengers

"Mike" and Chief Steward Schickel.

New York The hours of sailings of big passenger steamships are as rigidly adhered to as are railroad schedules and it takes something of great moment to hold a vessel at her pier after sailing time. But there are exceptions to the rule, as was evidenced at a recent sailing of the "America" of the United States Lines, which was delayed for the smallest reason, in a physical sense, that ever held up a departure.

Time came to cast off the mooring lines. Then it was discovered that "Mike," the famous sea-going canary, owned by Paul Schickel, chief steward of the "America," was not aboard. While passengers asked the reason for the delay stewards rushed about and finally located "Mike" aboard the "President Polk" on the other side of the pier, where he was flitting from cage to cage of Hartz Mountain canaries that vessel had just brought in from Europe. "Mike" refused to come to Schickel until he had welcomed all his cousins and in the meantime the "America" was prevented from sailing, for to proceed to sea without the little songster would have been without precedent.

To passengers who traveled aboard the America, "Mike," who is never locked in a cage and has the full run of the ship, is a constant source of delight.

The bird is a great singer and loves good music. He will fly into the music room and perch on the grand piano while some one is playing, occasionally joining in with his piccolo-like obligato. If a false note is struck, however, "Mike" shows his resentment by shrill chirps and fluttering about the hands of the performers.

"Mike" shows up at all ship dances and hops about on the piano when waltzes are played, but, if the orchestra plays too discordant jazz music, he flies away.

Entertaining the passengers in the third cabin is a duty which "Mike" has taken on himself and he is often found there perched on some child's shoulder while he goes through his entire repertoire for an admiring group.

"Mike" has a scrappy nature and is able to take care of himself in every way. He is not at all afraid of the ship's cat, who, from experience, knows that the long claws of the canary can inflict nasty scratches.

A soft whistle from Schickel is sufficient to summon "Mike" when the bird is within hearing distance. He perches on the steward's finger and allows himself to be petted by passengers, but is rather reserved in accepting these overtures, pecking at any hand which ruffles his shiny feathers.

Many offers have been made Schickel for "Mike," but he has refused them all, and the canary continues as chief unofficial entertainer aboard the "America."

SOME POSSIBLE PRISON T ESTIMONIALS TO DR. COUE

Dear Dr. Coue: Before taking four bottles of your auto-suggestion I was very miserable. I am serving a life term in prison, and, as I am only twenty-six years old now, the future looked very depressing. I began saying over and over, as directed by you: "Every day in every way my term is getting shorter." It worked so well that yesterday I called the warden and notified him my term was up.

The only trouble is that he refused to believe me. Can't you fix it so he and I can do your stuff together?

Many happy returns of the day,
GYP THE KNIFER.

* * *

My Dear Doc: For years I was annoyed by my surroundings. I thought my cell was too small and unattractive. I even had the silly idea prison life was confining and that it cramped a guy's style. I have taken four of your auto-suggestion capsules in hot water after meals for six days, as directed, and now I think I'm in the presidential suite at the Waldorf-Astoria.

I am now bothered only by a firm conviction that my quarters are too roomy for a single man and that the furnishings are too elaborate and the service too excellent. Everything is O. K. except that the guest elevator doesn't work as it should.

Four of my manservants left last night, but I shall will them back presently. If I continue to respond to your treatment I intend to sell this institution and go to Europe. Have a cigar?

Yours sincerely,
JACK (Butcher) McGONIGIGLE.

* * *

Dr. Coue:

Esteemed Physician—You are wonderful. I am doing fifty years here. I started my term last week, and until I heard of you it seemed to me I might be in prison most of my life. I was caught with the goods, and had no hope of a pardon until I bought some of your subconscious self-literature at the corner bug store. I applied all the literature to my head in the form of a hot poultice and kept THINKING I would get a pardon. Yesterday twenty-seven pardons arrived.

RED GOWANUS.

P. S.—None of the pardons was for me, but I am going to keep thinking.

* * *

Doctor:

Your "It passes! It passes!" routine is the adder's tusks. Last night I broke out of the prison and had almost reached the wall when a guard fired at me. I heard the bullets singing toward me. Standing stock still, I repeated "It passes! It passes!" over and over again.

All the bullets passed but two. The prison surgeon is probing for them and I am back at the old stand. Can there be any mistake?
TOM (THE CARVER) BLUDDGE.

Dear Doc Coue:

I am rushing you this testimonial to let you know how your remedy worked. Last night I nearly escaped in a packing box. I had secreted myself inside and had been loaded onto a truck with a lot of outbound merchandise. I kept saying "Every day in every way I am getting freer and freer," but the truck drivers overheard me. They made me get out and try to prove it. I now have ten extra years in which to read your books.

ONE GUN JESSIE.

* * *

Dear Doctor:

The turnkey here is very inconsiderate. He locks my cell door every night. I have read about your auto-suggestion. Can you pick a lock with it? If so, rush details.

SNAKE ANIMELLIO.

P. S.—I hear you come from Nancy. I knew a girl by that name, too.

BECOMES L. A. BANK OFFICER

R. O. Church Elected V. Pres. of Security Trust and Savings Bank

R. O. Church, head of the First National bank of Burbank which now goes under the name of Security State Bank until February 3, when it merges into the Security Trust, was elected vice-president of the Security Trust and Savings Bank of Los Angeles, at the Tuesday business session of the board of directors.

The announcement was made to the Los Angeles papers Wednesday when five other bank officials were appointed as vice-presidents. The other officers are Philip D. Kennedy at the head office; James B. Gist at the Guaranty office, J. E. Hatch at the Long Beach branch, W. R. Scoville at the Pasadena branch and Fred Weddington at the new Lankershim bank.

The Los Angeles Times in announcing it said:

"Mr. Kennedy comes to the Security from the First Federal Foreign Banking Association of New York City, of which he was a vice-president. He became director of the New York School of Commerce in 1912, and in 1913 undertook an investigation of the "free ports" of Europe for the Merchants' Association of New York, and when the ways and means committee of congress took up this matter, he was the first person called to testify.

"Mr. Gist, who was elected a vice-president and will be located at the Guaranty office of the Security bank, is well known in Los Angeles banking circles and was for eight years, secretary and manager of the Los Angeles Clearing-house.

"J. E. Hatch, who became a vice-president at the Long Beach branch, is the son of P. E. Hatch, long prominent in Southern California banking circles.

"W. R. Scoville, elected a vice-president at Pasadena, started with the Pasadena National Bank as a bookkeeper in 1906, and rose through the various responsibilities until he became cashier of the National Bank and Trust Company of Pasadena in 1919. That institution later merged with the Security Trust and Savings Bank as the Pasadena branch, and Mr. Scoville has since been assistant manager of the Pasadena branch.

"R. F. Church of Burbank, and Fred Weddington of Lankershim come into the Security family as vice-presidents through the merging of their respective banks. Mr. Church has been cashier of the First National Bank of Burbank for many years, and in active charge of its operations. Mr. Weddington has been president of the Bank of Lankershim, and prominently identified with the development of the eastern end of the San Fernando valley.

"Irving J. Mitchell was given the rank of assistant vice-president"

Women in the Forest

By Charles H. Shinn
Forest Examiner

Unwritten as yet is the book which shall relate the part taken by noble-hearted, forest-loving women in offices and in field work these thirty years helping to conserve our resources.

Many years ago the young wife of a forest ranger, visiting relatives in a city, listened to a lecture delivered to a large audience by a famous woman who said, "We women will no longer be household drudges. None of our daughters needs to learn how to make bread—buy it from the bakers."

This greatly amused the ranger's wife, whose cabin was five miles from a postoffice and 40 miles from a bakery. She went home and told it everywhere; she alluded to herself as an "H. D."; she continued to make her own bread and taught that ancient art to her daughters; she sometimes went out on the fire-fighting lines with her husband and her children; she saddled her pony and carried water and food to the men. Over and over, in those pioneer times, our Uncle Sam had the services of the entire family for the wages of one plain ranger.

This woman was passionately devoted to the forest; she was running over with vitality and the joy of life; she was her husband's true comrade and helper at every turn; her humor and cheerfulness were a daily inspiration.

In all the years since the National Forest Service began, women have done their share, some in office work, others as keepers of fire lookouts, a few, in times of need, as scalers of lumber. All that prevents the much wider use of educated women in the forest work is their lack of technical training in the best forest schools. This will come in time. The University of California is a co-educational institution, and may well lead in the scientific education of women to carry on some of the most important lines of forest work, especially perhaps in laboratories, in lessening forest waste, and in the planting and care of young forests.

One thing is certain: women have loved the great outdoors, the trees, the wild life, the lakes, streams, mountains, for just as many ages uncounted as have the men. They have done their full share in conquering the wilderness, and have steadily aided in creating a public opinion, here and elsewhere, in favor of protecting our forest resources. At every crisis, in every neighborhood, all over California, they have spoken up for forestry.

MANY ATTEND KIWANIS LUNCH

Burbank Business Men Enjoy Noonday Celebration

Burbank Kiwanians celebrated the eighth birthday anniversary of the organization at their luncheon Wednesday noon at the Sunset Canyon Country Club. There were sixty-eight live business men present.

The out-of-town speaker who was to have been present was not able to attend. W. P. Coffman, postmaster, was the chief speaker of the day. He gave a little personal talk on what Kiwanis meant to him. He told how through the club he had become acquainted with the business men of Burbank.

Next week Prof. Moore of the High School will bring Mr. Rimmer who will speak to the Kiwanians about the under privileged boy. Since the 1923 program for the Kiwanians will be to take care of this kind of a child the address promises to be of especial interest.

The men were asked to boost the show which is to be given Monday evening at the Victory theatre. The first showing of Rupert Hughes' "Cimme," is on the ticket. Three acts from the Orpheum Circuit will follow and will be part of the two and a half hour's entertainment.

The visitors present were: Bartley Sims, S. S. Becker, E. W. Anders, E. Swift Train, Waltch Price, J. F. Olmstead, N. M. Green, R. M. Burgess, E. H. Combs, F. L. Maynard, Wallace Kreador, publisher of the Mt. Lowe News and Allen Barton.

"When You Buy Advertising, You Buy Circulation"

Advertised Goods Reach You Without Lost Motion

A big part of the cost of living today may be charged to lost motion, to slow, slipshod distribution of goods, and to old-style, wasteful selling methods.

For example, every year tons of fruits and vegetables rot on the ground, because it doesn't pay to pick them. Discouraged growers plant less the next season, and the supply of food is reduced. Meanwhile, consumers in the cities near by grumble over high prices. Demand and supply are not brought together.

Contrast this with the handling of oranges. $1,000,000 a year is spent for advertising by the co-operative association of the California Fruit Growers. A large sum; yet it is only about one-fifth of a cent per dozen—one-sixtieth of a cent for each orange sold.

And this advertising has kept down the cost of oranges. To quote an official of the Exchange:

"The cost of selling oranges and lemons through the California Fruit Growers' Exchange is lower today than it was ten years ago.

"In the twelve years since the first campaign was launched the consumption of Californian oranges has doubled. The American consumer has been taught by co-operative advertising to eat nearly twice as many oranges as before.

"Had the orange industry remanied on the old basis, there would have been no profit in growing oranges. New acreage would not have been planted. Old orchards would most surely have been uprooted and other crops planted."

Advertising, properly done, saves money for the consumer and makes money for the producer by driving out wasteful methods, increasing volume and cutting down the costs of selling and distribution.

LABOR LAWS AT SACRAMENTO THIS YEAR

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 25.—The California State Federation of Labor has sent a strong delegation to Sacramento to work for the passage of a program of labor legislation which the organization hopes to see enacted during the present session.

Labor leaders have announced that strenuous efforts will be made to secure approval of the program, although the leaders in the movement confess their belief that many of the propositions they are advancing will be defeated.

Labor chiefs are unanimous in their approval of the committees on labor named in both houses. Senator Daniel C. Murphy, past president of the state federation of labor, heads the upper house committee, while Joseph F. Burns, of San Francisco, is chairman of the assembly labor committee. Nine of the thirteen members of the assembly committee are regarded as pro-labor.

The complete legislative program which the labor federation is advancing is as follows:

Amendment to the women's 8-hour law to include work taken from the establishment to be completed at home.

Amendment to the law requiring employers to publish strike notices to require them also to publish sanitary and living conditions of camps.

Law requiring sheriffs to notify the state labor commissioner in cases of attachment so that wage claims of workers will be amply protected.

Amendment to the elevator seat law, making compulsory the placing of seats where operators may sit on them.

Amendment to the act providing for one day's rest in seven, to make it criminal to permit employes to work seven days without rest.

Amendment of the 9-hour drug clerk law to overcome a recent adverse court ruling.

Amendment of the small claims court law to allow filing labor claims in it and allowing the labor commissioner to appear in behalf of workers.

Law permitting labor commissioner to file civil claims for wages without the customary filing fee.

Several amendments strengthening the workmen's compensation insurance and safety act.

Protection of flour, grain and grist mills workers from dust.

Prohibiting the use of the word "co-operative" by industries not truly organized on a co-operative basis in which workers share in the profits.

Providing toilet facilities for motion picture machine operators.

Prohibiting small boys and girls from operating motion picture machines in public schools.

Closing schools on Washington's birthday and Labor day.

Extension of the women's minimum wage law to cover school teachers not now included.

A more adequate pension system for school teachers.

Establishment of comfort stations in all cities of 100,000 population or over.

Making it a misdemeanor for a woman to consent to work more than 8 hours a day. At present, only the employers are liable to arrest.

State plumbing law which will require all master and journeyman plumbers to take examinations and secure licenses.

Advancing the time when initiative and referendum petitions must be filed.

Pension for state employes.

ANNUAL STOCKMEN'S WEEK AT U. C. FARM

February 19 to February 23 was set for annual stockmen's week by representatives of the various organized livestock interests of the state and members of the Division of Animal Husbandry at a recent meeting held at the University of California farm at Davis. Into this week will be crowded a program of intense interest to beef and dairy cattle men, hog raisers and wool growers.

As in the past, auction sales of pure bred live stock will be an important feature of the week's activities.

SANITARY MOTIF OF PLUMBING IS SPREADING

Given impetus by the success that has marked the campaign of the Sanitary Development League of Southern California to educate the public to the necessity of better sanitation and the use of more modern plumbing materials, the movement launched here has extended over the entire Pacific coast.

This fact was learned yesterday when announcement was made that the plumbing industry of Washington and Oregon has formed similar organizations and that Northern California will do likewise. The new leagues have made inquiry as to the methods being used in Southern California with a view to following them.

The Sanitary Development League of Southern California is at present advertising in 38 cities. The 200 members have pledged themselves to maintain the highest ideals and practices of the plumbing industry and they are endeavoring to impress upon the public the advantages and economics of better sanitation and materials.

"Our campaign was a public necessity because of the rapid building growth in Southern California," said John Hokom, an officer of the league. "It is absolutely essential that the best in plumbing materials be used if we are to safeguard the health of the great number of people who are building their homes here.

"There has been an immediate response to our campaign. The demand for better materials and the adoption of more modern methods of sanitation is general. The public has been quick to see that our messages, printed in the daily newspapers, are designed to protect the public from the menace of cheaply installed and unsanitary plumbing—that we are actuated by a desire to serve the public.

"We are glad to see that the northern states, and especially Northern California, are following our lead."

UNCLE SAM IS BUILDING OWN DIRIGIBLE

WASHINGTON, Jan 25.—(United Press)—Within the largest single room in the world—the hangar built by the United States Navy at the Naval Air Station at Lakehurst, N. J.—America's first large "home-built" rigid airship, the ZR-1, is now under construction.

Lessons learned from European builders, augmented by those gained through its own experiences, have enabled the Navy Department to plan and start construction on its first Zeppelin type airship, which, the department believes, will be the foundation for the nation's future success in commercial and naval aviation.

Several years have been required for equipment and construction of the plant, before work on the big ship could begin. Construction of one single room, with a clear floor space of 804 feet by 264 feet, and 192 feet in height, was one of the problems to be solved by engineers before work on the ship itself could be begun.

The building, now completed, is a unit in one of the most complete naval air stations in the world. To this station America will look for most of her future development in lighter-than-air construction and maintenance.

The magnitude of the building is hard to grasp without comparison, but when the department announced that on a mezzanine floor, skirting the edges of the big room, there is space for a gas bag storage room, a large cafeteria and a kitchen supplied with all electrical and steam cooking conveniences; that under this floor are rigger shops, balloon shops, wood shops, metal shops and machine shops, all equipped with the most modern machinery for repairs of airships, the size of the great chamber is more easily comprehended.

Doors and windows of the big shed are all operated electrically. The doors, each weighing 1,350 tons, can be closed by hand at the rate of 8 feet per minute, or by power at 20 feet per minute. The windows, necessarily high from the ground, are closed and opened by push buttons, making ventilation easily controlled.

Great banks of flood lights line the walls for lighting the interior of the shed at night, while the exterior is equipped with target lights and searchlights for night landing.

Another feature of the station, required for handling the big ship, is a tower 164 feet high and resembling the famous Eiffel Tower of Paris. The nose of the ship will be moored to this tower, making it possible to use the hangar for construction and repair of other ships.

The tower will be supplied with gasoline through electrically driven pumps which will drive it straight to the ship's tanks.

Hydrogen for the gas bag and electric transformers for charging the batteries will also be located in the machinery room at its base. Winches to tow the ship to her moorings and hold her fast in the wind are also located in the machine room. An elevator and a ladder give access to the loading platform at the top of the tower for the crew.

The hydrogen plant, consisting of a generator building, a compressor and storage building, a blower house, one 1,000,000 cubic foot tank and another 25,000 cubic foot capacity, is said by the department to be one of the most complete in the world. The gas is produced by the electrolytic process of breaking water mixed with caustic soda up into hydrogen and oxygen. The latter product is stored in one 10,000 cubic foot tank. The production capacity of the plant is 70,000 cubic feet of hydrogen and 35,000 cubic feet of oxygen in 24 hours.

PORTER HOUSE TO BE RAZED AT SANDUSKY

SANDUSKY, O., Jan 25.—The hotel for which your Porter House steak was named is being razed.

Built in 1817, the Porter House considering its size and accommodations, is said to be unrivaled in the midwest for picturesque historical background.

Charles Dickens, who visited it in 1847, is credited with giving the hotel its first flush of fame. Dickens was so pleased with a steak served him in the little dining room, that, when in Buffalo a few days later, he asked for a steak, "like they serve at the Porter House in Sandusky."

The English author spread the fame of the Porter House steak throughout the country by dwelling on its deliciousness in many American addresses.

Soon afterward leading cafes and hotels announced "Porter House" steaks. It is not known whether any one ever actually took the trouble to get the cooking formula from the Porter House chef. It is said here that chefs merely started calling their best steaks "Porter House."

The old hotel, declared a menace by the state fire marshal, has had a half dozen names during its lifetime, but there are still a few residents of Sandusky who remember it as the Porter House.

VICTORIA, British Columbia.—The value of the mineral output of British Columbia for the year 1922 is estimated at $32,167,463, as against $28,066,641 in the previous year.

In making an effort to know himself the average man wastes a lot of time that he might spend in forming agreeable acquaintances.

BUY PLUMBING DIRECT

BUY YOUR plumbing direct from a responsible Plumbing Dealer. Don't pay a third party an extra fee to buy it for you. A General Contractor, naturally and legitimately requires you to pay him for acting as his agent. Then again, he usually gives the job to the lowest bidder. The lowest bidder naturally figures on the cheapest job he thinks will pass muster. The results are nearly always disappointing.

BUY DIRECT; pay only the price of the plumbing with no added fee to anyone. Add to the cost, the amount you save in that way and get a better plumbing job.

Above all else, however, select a member of the Sanitary Development League of Southern California.

The League is composed of over 200 plumbing concerns in Southern California, who are pledged to maintain the highest business standards.

Their membership in the League is itself a guarantee of skilled workmanship, high-grade materials and fair prices.

Truths in Epigram

Against stupidity the gods themselves are helpless.—Schiller.

The deepest depth of vulgarism is that of setting money up as the work of the covenant.—Carlyle.

SECRETARY WEEKS INDIGNANT

Secretary Weeks has told congress in plain terms what he thinks of its refusal to permit General Harbord to retire on pay. He says that it is an insult to General Harbord and to the government itself. While it is easy to see how the secretary might feel this way, it is doubtful that his indignation will be shared by the country at large. Congress has shown a tendency to cripple the effectiveness of the army. When in economic mood it has been in the habit of devoting its emotions somewhat to cutting down the military establishment; not forgetting an occasional slash at the navy. Weeks is ambitious for the maintenance of an adequate force. Such must be the natural prompting of pride, and it also is in consonance with sound Americanism.

General Harbord has given distinguished service. He is an officer of fine ideals and ability. He leaves voluntarily to accept a position in civil life far more remunerative than would be possible for him in his profession, even though he reached the topmost station. Therefore it is not to be asserted that he needs the money. The secretary thinks it should be given just the same. Here at least there is room for argument.

The people of this country, in their desire to be generous to their soldiers and ex-soldiers are thinking particularly of the boy who watched in the trenches for the zero hour, and then went over the top. They have in mind the wounds, the invalidism, the bravery of these boys. They would not begrudge money for them. That a general going to highly paid duties, going voluntarily, and while the army needs his skill, is similarly entitled to their consideration, is a proposition from which it is probable they would withhold assent; at least they would want better reasons than cited by the secretary, for while not disapproving his prejudice, they are quite conscious of it.

THE LIST GROWS LONG

A dispatch from Chicago dated the 21st of January stated that in that city there had been so far this year thirty-seven deaths due directly to alcohol poisoning. In other words, there had been this number of deaths caused by bootleg liquor. There is no reason to suppose that Chicago in respect of this serious matter differs from other centers of population. Probably the deaths ascribed to other causes but really due to alcohol poisoning, are far more than these figures show. There is to be considered also the fact that in crimes of violence involving fatalities, the bootlegger type of whisky has been the inspiration.

Doubtless among the victims of poisoning there have been some of potential worth. The dipsomaniac who deliberately takes the stuff, knowing the risk he runs does not leave a very appalling gap in the ranks of society even if he drops out suddenly. Young men and boys, thinking they are being smart, may be lured into indulgence. It is a duty to protect them. Suppression of the illicit traffic in liquor is no longer a mere question of prohibiting the use of strong drink. It is a question as to whether certain murderous larcenists, plying a deadly vocation, shall be permitted to batten on the weakness of others. The man opposed to prohibition, and quite ready to defend his right to drink, nevertheless would turn with disgust and horror from the chance to imbibe the wares of the bootlegger. He has no assurance that whisky under false labels is not getting into the hands of dealers who would not handle it if they knew its quality.

Enforcement of prohibition has become vital as an instrument for the safeguarding of human life.

IN THE LONG AGO

From discovery and exploitation of the tomb of Pharoah Tutenkhamun, the world gets an astounding revelation of a civilization that rose to splendor 3200 years ago, that crumbled, faded, vanished and well-nigh had been forgot. Of the magnificence of those times the lavish and expensive artistry of the tomb and its furnishings give silent and undisputed evidence. Even in that ancient day Egypt, at the crest of culture and enterprise, was a place of ruins so old that no fragment of their history remained. People of the time of this pharoah, and his predecessors, had looked upon the pyramids, marveled at their construction and purpose, but found no solution for any part of the problem. The peoples who had builded them were then more remote from the pharoahs than are the pharoahs from 1923 A. D.

Whatever human intelligence may have accomplished more many hundred years before Christ, it has left no sign that it had known any method of quick transport or quick communication. Men had skill in metals, in architecture, in the creation of fabrics, but they could not send a message through space. There were no giant engines speeding people and chattels from place to place. Savants had studied the heavens a little, but of the earth, save that small portion where they dwelt, they could have known nothing.

They held to belief in gods, and perhaps in a God. Monuments and engravings make this clear. But the glory of the pharoahs departed never to return save as the explorer centuries after has glimpsed it faintly. Its great cities are dust.

"So fleet the work of men;
Back to the earth again
Ancient and holy things
Fade like a dream."

THE LOW COST OF LIVING

One of the social economists much given to statistics, says that the cost of living for the individual in Chicago now is $2.50 a week. This is for food alone. The figures fail to impress. They could mean nothing but that a person with $2.50 in his pocket, and no demands on it except for table expenses, might ward off starvation for a week. In reality he might do it for much less. He might live on a ten-cent loaf a day, and drink water free of cost. This would permit his $2.50 to last quite a while. But on the most liberal diet allowed him by the restrictions of the economist, necessarily he must fail to preserve health and strength, or to be in places where food is displayed, or others are eating actual meals, without being conscious of the impulse to commit crime.

As a matter of fact the theories of the figuring ladies and gentlemen are not particularly valuable, save as they get joy of compiling them. The frugal housewife, scanning things in market, and finding that she must try to content herself with inferior materials in a scant quantity, is not looking to the theorist for information. She has information of her own, handed to her by grim experience.

The government has decided that the consulate at Newcastle-on-Tyne shall remain closed. The British government had canceled the exequators of the American officials there, on the ground that the Americans had been too active in promotion of American commerce. It would be interesting to know how long British officials failing to be similarly active on behalf of English trade, would hold their jobs.

THE PRESENT SITUATION

By DR. FRANK CRANE

I have been privileged to look over the advanced sheets of a book entitled "League or War," by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale university.

Dr. Frank Crane

In this he states the case so clearly that I cannot refrain from quoting his opening remarks:

"Over four years have flown by since the armistice and America still remains without participation in any effective organization to prevent a recurrence of world war.

"We have not yet joined the League of Nations. We have not created the 'Association of Nations' promised in the 1920 republican platform. We are not yet officially represented on the World Court of Justice. Even the Hughes treaties, negotiated at the arms conference, are not yet in force because not yet ratified by France and Italy.

"This is surely a most remarkable situation in view of the fact that the vast majority of the people of the United States passionately desire peace, and do not care whether the organization for preserving peace is the so-called Wilson league unimpaired, the Wilson league with the Lodge reservations, the Harding association, the Hughes pacts, the Root court, or anything else, provided only it be effective to keep the peace. Four years is a long time in which to do nothing but quarrel over what shall be done and who shall get the credit.

"And while we are engaged in these miserable quarrels the embers of the world war have not yet been put out; but, on the contrary, are lighting new fires, which already seriously threaten to spread into another world conflagration.

"Those who realize, with Justice Clarke, that civilization must destroy war, otherwise war will destroy civilization, feel that it is high time that this question of an effective mechanism to prevent or minimize war should be restudied earnestly and dispassionately.

"No one doubts that eventually we shall have a world organization to keep the peace. The only important question is: When? Shall it have to wait until the question is again impressed upon us by another world war, which shall completely or nearly destroy civilization as to require centuries in which to recover? Or shall it come about in time to prevent that horror?"

The most appalling thing in the late German attack on civilization was the prostitution of the intellectuals wherein they advocated the German course in the war.

Professor Fisher's book gives evidence that all the intellectuals of the United States are not hamstrung and tongue-tied, but are true to their convictions even when their own nation has strayed from the path.

DISCUSSION CLUB

(Join)

"Feel Bad" or "Feel Badly"

Frederick A. Brown: "Beyond doubt 'I feel badly', as commonly used, is wrong. And yet, as you very properly pointed out, it may be correct. 'I feel badly' with perfect grammatical accuracy expresses the fact that my sense of feeling is bad. But if that be so, the verb feel can take an adverb after all. There is a seeming contradiction here. I suppose your reply is that when used in that sense the verb is not copulative. But isn't that making it rather hard for those of your readers who have not themselves given the subject fairly close study? Remember even professional grammarians stumble. Are there not some who say that bad is, of course, correct in the sentence under discussion, but that (since it cannot possibly be an adjective) it is, in that construction, some peculiar kind of adverb?

"Don't you think it would be more helpful if instead of stating, in effect: 'The law saith thou shalt not use an adverb after a copulative verb, and therefore thou must not,' you were to make clear the reason for the law?"

Answer: "Feel bad" should be employed when one is telling how one feels, or how some one else feels (as to physical or mental condition). Feel is a verb, call it copulative if you wish, which functions like am. Of the two, adjective and adverb, am should be followed by an adjective, not an adverb. Likewise feel should be followed by an adjective. Examples: I am well (here well is an adjective); I feel well; I am strong; I feel strong; I am ill; I feel ill.

Next, the word bad is an adjective. It means ill (in mind or body). Therefore, I feel bad is correct, and I feel badly is not correct.

A recent novel gives many examples of the use of "feel bad". The following are only a few of the large collection that may be found in the novel: "Mamma feels bad"; "Don't feel so bad, Jean"; "You mustn't feel bad"; "Jean wondered how bad father felt."

THE LISTENING POST

By James W. Foley

JAMES W. FOLEY

The laborers resolved to dispense with the Boss.

For by the new dispensation they held bosses to be superfluous and obnoxious.

Why should one free man take orders from another?

Were not all men born free and equal?

* * *

To be sure they were.

Why should some Boss or Overlord give orders?

Why should free and independent citizens take orders at all?

And having asked these questions, the laborers resolved to get rid of the Boss.

* * *

The job was a big one.

And having done their work through the week, the laborers received pay.

The equivalent of labor as far as it could be determined.

And with the pay they were able to get food, clothing, shelter, amusement and whatever things they wished.

* * *

But the laborers argued that the Boss was not necessary.

He did nothing but give orders.

He did not handle a pick or shovel or bar.

He merely sat in a safe place and issued commands.

He was not a worker.

* * *

Accordingly they got rid of him.

They waited on him in a body and told him to get out.

And threatened violence if he did not.

And being a sensible man he went.

Leaving no plans or directions.

He packed up and went.

The laborers then argued among themselves as to how the work should be done.

And there were as many plans as there were men.

No two agreed exactly.

Neither did they agree as to who should do the hardest work and who should do the easiest.

* * *

All the morning they argued and contended.

Their tools lay beside them unused.

The work progressed not an inch.

For the workers were busy talking.

The sun rose higher in the heavens.

And at last the day was far spent.

And no work done.

* * *

There was no direction.

No co-ordination of effort.

One man dug a little here and another a little there.

And at the close of the day no advance had been made.

Except that the Boss had been fired.

* * *

And after several days the men found that it was necessary for some one to direct.

So they met and chose a director.

From among themselves.

And he went ahead with the work.

Not as well as the original Boss.

For there was much strife and contention and waste of time.

* * *

And the work was delayed far beyond the time it was to have been completed.

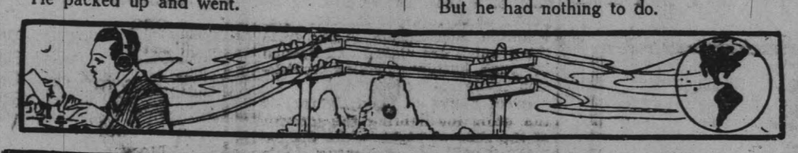
The quality of it was poor.

And the pay correspondingly less.

And at last the contractor fired the whole lot of the men and closed down the job.

And then every man was his own Boss.

But he had nothing to do.



Songs of the Poets

Home—Author Unknown

A melancholy little man was seated on the ground;
He showed supreme indifference to everything around.
"Why do you not run home," I cried, "and tumble into bed?"
He looked at me expressively, and presently he said:

"One rubber plant can never make a home,
Not even when combined with brush and comb,
And spoon, and fork, and knife,
And graphophone and wife.
"One rubber plant can never make a home;"

I said: "What does your dwelling lack? The pretty hearthside tone?
The note of domesticity?" He gave a fearful groan.
"Alas," he cried while from his seat he slowly upward bobbed
And seized his hat, "a flat's a flat." Together then we sobbed:

"One rubber plant can never make a home;
One day did not suffice for building Rome.
One gas-log and a cat
Can't civilize a flat.
No! Something more is needed for a home."

THE AMERICAN EYE AND THE MENU CARD

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

We are going to understand what we are ordering when hereafter we seek to satisfy our appetites in a public eating place.

That's great. Why the American eye has been so long compelled to struggle through the French language to find out it can afford to feed the American stomach is a question too deep for me.

Alien menus have appeared in backwoods hotels when nobody in the township save the imported "chef"—who was often German—knew what the French trimmings following the recorded list of dishes meant.

All the bewildered patrons of high class—or imitation high class eating houses—could do when they looked at the menu was to call a waiter, point to an item and ask: "What does that mean?" I've done it myself and endured the scorn of the magnificent person who served me with such composures as I could muster. I've been snubbed by doctors who could write Latin prescriptions and by waiters who understood what the French phrases on menu cards meant until I felt like a worm. That is a feeling I don't enjoy.

Once upon a time it was supposed that all good cooks came from France, hence the French menus. It enabled the landlord to add about 60 per cent to the bill. Incidentally it enabled folks to make a good many mistakes in ordering; and then to remedy them, they often ordered more.

Great are the ways of finance.

But the American Caterers' association has come to the rescue of the oppressed American public. We are to see our menus printed in plain American.

No more will "au gratin" plague our eyes. Instead our optics will be gladden by the simple announcement that our spuds are served "with cheese."

We will not hereafter suffer mystification when we read "parsnips a couvert" nor disappointed, when we lift the silver lid, to discover ordinary garden parsnips that have had nothing weird done to them but which have simply been placed "under cover." The appearance of "eggs and gustum" will not cause our mouths to water for we shall be told in plain English that the hostelry is offering eggs "to one's taste." Nobody from the brush will mistake "al fresco" for a bootleg cocktail, and instead of seeing a soul appalling reference on the food card to the "chef de cousine" we shall see a plebean mention of the "head cook." Hurrah. Comme il Faut (meaning "as it should be").

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

ENFORCING PROHIBITION

[Brockton Times]

Governor Cox's proposed dollar-a-year men to enforce prohibition will have no more success than the regular paid employees of the government in enforcing the provisions of the Volstead act until the people of this country come to their senses.

So long as those men who by education or wealth or personal achievement should lead the community glory in the breaking of the law regarding liquor, there is going to be trouble.

The most amazing spectacle in this country today is the open and flagrant disregard of the prohibition law by otherwise respectable and law-abiding citizens.

Prohibition has come to stay. Changes there may be in the enforcement law. But this country never again will stand for the open saloon and the legalized sale of whisky and other distilled and hard liquors.

LIKENESS THAT ALARMS

[New York Times]

The public is learning for the second time in a few months that between the Russian Bolsheviki at their very worst and Illinois coal miners in a rage with strike breakers there is little or nothing to choose. What makes this likeness the more alarming is the fact that so many of these miners are not recently arrived foreigners, but representatives of our older and supposedly best stocks.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

From Ireland come tales of violence and distress. What is the matter with Ireland? Alas that no man may tell.

There are executions right along. The bursting of bombs is heard. Houses are burned and railways destroyed. For what purpose all these things are being done, is a mystery at present beyond solving.

HENRY JAMES

The ministry in power seeks authority to make penalties more speedy and drastic. The talk of peace, and the faint prospect of peace seem to belong to the past.

According to a Dublin paper there has been a distinct lowering of moral standards, ordinary commercial honesty having slumped during recent disorders. It says that throughout Ireland people are avoiding payment of their just debts. Shop-keepers are left to whistle for their money, and so, unable to pay their rents. Liquor laws are broken flagrantly and openly in every town and village. Illicit whisky is made and sold without concealment.

These facts are disheartening to all who wish well for Erin's welfare. Yet they are not particularly strange. Living where an outburst of outlawry may be expected at any time, where dynamite and the torch are active agencies, it might easily seem not worth while to live according to approved rule.

* * *

It is possible that a minister would not resent the suggestion of a layman. Of course the layman may be mistaken in the belief that actuates the giving of the opinion, and then the minister is at full liberty so to state.

Last Sunday one minister preached a hell fire sermon. He was careful to explain that the fire was not the literal sort, but that the agony of the experience awaiting the sinner was worse than a blaze; it had been described as fire because that figure was the best that could be found to convey the horrible idea.

In the opinion of the layman, such a sermon is destructive of ideals, tends to create a feeling of revolt in the soul, affronts the intelligence, and if it pulls in a single sinner, that his conversion is due to cowardice and is only skin deep.

At last the wife got a divorce.

We are a people who, under the present paternal system of Indian administration, are deprived of every self-independent right, who are languishing in misery and dying of starvation."

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

No home is complete nowadays without some sort of an "Eat and Grow Thin" book on the center table. We all read them. They afford an easy way of compromising with our consciences. After we have stuffed for weeks on thick soups and heavy pies and cakes—to which is added a few pounds of chocolate creams by the ladies of our houses—we feel the waistband tightening and the collar beginning to shrink.

"Where is that book?" we ask ourselves. "I must read it. The author has a really sensible plan for fat reduction."

It is a sensible plan, too. The only weak spot in it is that it calls for semi-starvation. No matter what the eat-and-grow-thin advocates may say, the fact is that no one can take off fat without pain and fasting. But one can read such a book with immense benefit, and it may be that it will help one to abstain from that second helping of brown gravy.

However, what I started out to say was that the last time I took this easy road to reform I noted a pregnant sentence in the book I most favor. The author said:

"Bad tempered people either eat too much, or digest poorly, or do not eliminate freely."

Come to think of it, that is the truth. When I go on a diet—that is, during those occasional weeks when I stop eating potatoes and pie and cookies and ice cream and pudding and beans—my temper clears up. Rarely indeed is the voice of J. Pilgrim, Esq., raised in anger in his home. Mrs. John Pilgrim brightens up and that worry wrinkle disappears from between her eyes, and we go out at night and to the movies and the theater and have a good time generally. Likewise when Mrs. Pilgrim eats more fruit than she does spaghetti life in our domicile becomes one grand sweet song.

The trouble is that our appetites are forever getting the better of us. We derange our digestion or our eliminative processes or put on the few extra pounds that so handicap the fat men in this life——

It is no wonder that we snap at each other then. Invalids are rarely cheery. When they are, poor people, it is usually because they feel it is a duty.

And no one can be cheery as a duty and be really cheery.

Snoozer was just a bedraggled kitten when he straggled into the home of the parents of Joseph and Antoinnette Frascanco. Snoozer got all the cream off the milk bottles and soon began to dream the dreams of his young benefactors. Joseph, Antoinnette and Snoozer realized their triumph at the twenty-first annual show of the Atlantic club in the non-championship class.

GIANTS AND DWARFS

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE

Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.

(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

To account for those abnormalities of growth bv which some people remain abnormally diminutive all their days, while others become exceedingly tall, has long been a problem perplexing science.

Nor can science even now be said to have entirely solved it. Though certainly there is warrant for saying that the solution would today seem in a fair way to be fully reached, particularly as regards the uncommonly tall folk popularly known as giants.

Most of them, if not all of them, the available evidence indicates, owe their undue height to an early malfunctioning of the so-called pituitary gland. This gland, situated at the base of the brain, is to all appearance one of the most insignificant of organs, being ordinarily no larger than a pea. But it plays various roles of importance, not least being that of a regulator of bodily growth.

If for any reason the pituitary functions over-actively during the period of physical dveelopment, overgrowth of the skeleton results. Also there results an over-growth of tendons and ligaments. Children who have perhaps been growing quite normally begin to shoot up with disquieting rapidity.

Likewise there results, though in a different way, abnormality of bone growth if the pituitary begins to overfunction, not during, but after the usual period of physical development.

Instead of being elongated the bones broaden. The hands and feet increase in size, as do the ears and nose. Even the eyes and lips may be affected, becoming larger and coarser. To this species of belated giantism the term acromegaly has been applied.

If, on the opposite, the pituitary under-functions, before bone growth has been completed or fairly begun dwarfism follows. The fact of this has been experimentally established in the case of dogs from which the pituitary was partially removed.

But dwarfism is not nearly so often due to pituitary under-functioning as giantism is to pituitary over-functionnig. Malfunctioning of another gland—the thyroid—is known to be a common cause of dwarfism. Cretans are typical dwarfs of thyroid influence.

So, too, dwarfism may be brought about by unfavorable pre-natal conditions, especially conditions developing during foetal life and disease conditions in the mother. It may also be effected by the occurrence of rickets, a malady of conspicuously adverse influence on bone growth. And, finally, there are dwarfs for whose dwarfism science still is unable to offer any explanation whatever.

Theoretically, of course, the glandular causes of giantism and of dwarfism being recognized, it should be possible to deal with them effectively once signs of overfunctioning or under-functioning of the pituitary or the thyroid become evident. In actual practice corrective measures are not always easily applied. Progress, however, is being made and will doubtless be increasingly made as the principles of gland therapy become more and more known.

So that it is quite conceivable that the time may come when giants and dwarfs—comparatively few in upmber even now—will be rarely if ever encountered, thanks to prompt attacking of their handicap of giantism or dwarfism.

WRIST WATCH TO KEEP TAB ON DATES

PARIS (United Press.)—An ingenious plan for the absentminded business man has been conceived by a French inventor. It consists of a wrist-watch with the day-time hours divided into fifteen minute divisions. Into each of the divisions a tiny card could be inserted with a word or two written upon it to remind the wearer of his appointment or task for that moment. When the minute hand reached the card a small alarm bell rings until the memorandum card is withdrawn.

ABOLISH COMMERCIAL AGENTS

MEXICO CITY, Mexico (By mail to the United Press.)—Commercial attaches of Mexico in foreign countries may be withdrawn. The administration is planning the abolition of such posts.

RUSSIAN TURBANS

Almond green velvet is used for small Russian turbans stitched in silver.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE AIR INVENTED

DAYTON, O., Jan. 25.—McCook Field authorities claim to have perfected an instrument that will enable aviators, while flying, to talk to persons on the ground.

The feat has been accomplished by means of a loud speaking instrument located at the end of the fuselage of a Martin Bomber.

When tried out here a few days ago, the plane was three hundred feet in the air, but the pilot's voice was heard distinctly by persons on the ground.

McCook Field aero engineers have been working for several years to perfect an appliance of this kind. They expect to make certain changes in the instrument which will make it carry the voice with greater distinctness from greater altitudes.

ALMOND POLLINATION

California almond growers as well as scientific investigators will be interested in Bulletin No. 346 on Almond Pollination just issued by the University of California Agricultural Experiment station. The bulletin is by W. P. Tufts, assistant professor of Pomology and G. L. Philp, instructor in Pomology and reports the results of studies in the pollination of almonds covering the years 1916, 1917 and 1919.

The investigation shows that almond varieties may be roughly divided into two classes, early bloomers and late bloomers. All of the varieties thus far tested have proved self-sterile, at least in certain years. These varieties are listed and also the varieties which may be used successfully for cross-pollination. Pollinizing agencies, such as the honey bee, are necessary to the set of a good crop of fruit and it is recommended that one colony of honey bees be provided for each acre of orchard.

A copy of Bulletin No. 346 may be secured by addressing the director of the Agricultural Experiment station, University of California, Berkeley.

POULTRY TIPS BY RADIO

"Here is a tip for the poultry raiser," said the radio broadcaster at the State College of Washington the other night. "Green cut bone when fed fresh makes an excellent substitute for beef scrap in the poultry flock's diet. It must be bought in small lots, however, as it can not be kept fresh for any length of time, and may cause trouble if fed when spoiled."

Some folks get all heated up working so hard to keep cool.

TODAY

The Yesterday is gone at last
With all its smiles and tears,
What was Today lies in the past,
Stored with the dust of years.
I say good-by and it is gone,
Nor would I bid it stay,
For life bids me go on and on,
And life is in Today.

I thank Thee, Lord, or rain or shine,
Or glad or sad it be,
I thank Thee that Today is mine,
And for this light I see,
And for this hour that I may use,
This flower by the way,
I thank Thee, and may I not lose
The beauty of Today.

For all this arch of sky above,
For all the earth and sea,
For all the tenderness of love,
For all the joys there be,
For friends and dreams and work and light
And laughter, tears and play,
For all the things from dawn to night—
I thank Thee for Today.

And as the dusk and night come on,
And as the shadows flow,
And as the light is nearly gone,
And as the twilight glow
Gilds the horizon with its gold,
Find me the grace to say
For blessings countless and untold,
"I thank Thee for Today!"

The late Dennis Spencer was sitting at his desk one day when a Chinaman entered.

"You Mees Spenceh?" he asked.

"Yes, John, what can I do for you?"

"You lawyuh?"

"Yes."

"Now—a a-h, Mees Spencer, spozzin one China boy killum noddah one, how much you cost gittee him off?"

It was in the days of the low cost of living, so Spence said: "Oh, about $500 for defending a person wrongfully accused of murder."

"Fi' hunnet dollar? Chee Chli!" said the astonished oriental, and went out sadly shaking his head over the white man's avarice. Spencer forgot him until about two months later, when the Chinaman entered and plunking down $500 on the desk said casually: "A light, I killum."

The door of hope swings both ways.

HOWAT'S FATE IS ISSUE IN KANSAS

TOPEKA, Kans., Jan. 25 (United Press).—With the Kansas legislature considering repeal of the industrial court law, in operation for more than two years, interest centered in the future of Alexander Howat, imprisoned head of the Kansas miners' organization.

Howat, leader of the miners of Kansas, is the most famous of the convicted parties under the industrial court law. He refused to recognize court orders issued under its authority, and has been in prison at Pittsburgh for nearly a year.

District Judge Andrew Curran ordlered him sent to the penitentiary for violation of the law and for contempt of the court.

Friends and supporters of the deposed miner head made this action the primary issue when Curran announced for re-election. They threw their entire support to D. H. Wooley, while supporters of the industrial court law backed the incumbent. Wooley won by a large majority.

W. E. Freeman, president of the Kansas state federation of labor, declared the Howat case was the sole deciding issue in the race. But Wooley has never committed himself on the question of recommending Howat's immediate release from the penitentiary. Plans are on foot to place a number of petitions before Judge Wooley asking that he go into the matter immediately.

"What Judge Wooley will do in the matter has developed into a country-wide question, within the last few weeks," Freeman declared. "The Howat men elected Wooley believing his election would mean the immediate release of the idol of the miners. But nothing has been done since he took office recently."

In a recent election in the Kansas district national miners' organization, known friends of the imprisoned leader were victorious throughout. Howat supporters contend that this is a sure forecast of a renewal of his power as soon as he is releaased.

Former Governor Allen refused to take any action some months ago when a petition was presented to him asking Howat's release. He declared the district judge sentenced him for contempt and it was up to the judge to make a decision for or against clemency.
